

Anthony Brown is not just a military veteran turned successful franchisee, he's also something of a perfectionist and master with his hands.

In fact, the Army Veteran is a culinary expert that received gold medals and other awards during his twelve year military career. Brown competed in many culinary competitions during this time. He was honored in 1990 at the "Best of the Best" U.S. Army Food Program awards ceremony.

"It takes a lot of patience to be a good cook," Brown added. "Sometimes, the food you prepare doesn't come out exactly right. It's fun to experiment, but if you have a recipe that you know is good, follow the directions. I also like to share my culinary knowledge with other people so they can become better cooks."

Today, Brown has taken the recipe for success that 360clean offers their franchisees and built a business that he says gives him the same gratification he received as an award winning culinary expert.

He was able to start his 360clean franchise through the company's Veteran Franchise Program. The program offers Veterans a special financing program and other benefits that are beneficial to the launch of their business.

"Some of the things I brought with me from the military are quality, patience and attention to detail. These qualities have assisted in the growth of my 360clean franchise," Brown added.

There is no doubt that his success as a business owner is due to the natural strengths and abilities he possesses, but his ability to follow the directions of a proven recipe in business is the light that guides his path of future business success.
